July Update

You will have heard that restrictions are to be lifted from July 19th in England.

We have been eagerly awaiting this news but must react to it with concern and consideration.

This is not the end of Covid, and signs are still evident that it is spreading and increasing. It would be foolish to disregard the threat and its implications.

Since the first lockdown all our decisions relating to idodance have been based on what is best for our health and welfare, that of our Team and each and every one of you. This will continue to determine every decision we make.

September 6th is still the date we are working towards to resume classes. We will not be legally required to maintain social distancing, wear a face covering or provide hand sanitiser. We will continue some of these precautions to ensure everyone is safe and comfortable.

You will be informed of our modified practices and procedures nearer to the time.

Your thoughts and feelings would be much appreciated in this decision making.

Thank you all for standing by us and your kind words of understanding and support throughout this challenging period.

We can't wait to welcome you all back to class!

Bea & Lee xx
